Today, significantly, the war has increased the number of immigrants. The flood of immigrants to European countries has caused the balance and order of these countries to be disrupted most of the time. In recent years, the term crisis has been used for this situation. The European migration crisis is generally referred to as the political, social, and economic consequences that have arisen following the arrival of asylum seekers in Europe since 2015. This has had different results in the social-political arena of European countries. Although the appearance of these immigrants has decreased in recent years, in general, the discourse of anti-immigrant and xenophobia shows unprecedented growth in the public opinion of European citizens. For example, far-right parties in countries such as Austria and Italy, together with populist politicians in Central European countries, have made the most of this opportunity and have been able to achieve significant positions. The anti-immigrant debate is tied to criticism of Brussels and opposition to the European Union. It should be noted that the experience of European countries in facing this phenomenon is different, and according to the geographical conditions, each of them has a different view of this crisis. Despite this, most countries generally want to prevent the entry of asylum seekers into their country. The recent efforts of the heads of European countries to reach a comprehensive solution to face this crisis have not been successful, and many pillars of the European Union, including free movement and the Schengen system, have been exposed to reform and strengthen the supervision and control on the borders. The level of disagreement among the leaders of the European countries in this matter is so great that it has brought some countries in the south and center of the Union, which are on the path of the arrival of asylum seekers, closer to each other against Germany and France. According to the data, the most significant volume of the arrival of asylum seekers to Europe happened in 2015. A total of 1,015,078 asylum seekers entered this continent. As mentioned, this process continues due to the crisis of war, and removing or ignoring this issue can have wider human consequences, and in general, this seems impossible. Three points, more than All with immigration, in the destination countries, the crisis is more: 1) the capital and budget that the governments must consider for the immigrants. 2) due to the lack of land and space, the problem of marginalization is increasing. Therefore, the statistics of insecurity, delinquency, unemployment, and class gap are increasing more and more. 3) Spreading unemployment statistics in destination countries. My project is an attempt to solve these problems. In this project, an effort has been made to ensure that a person's human personality is wholly preserved and that he can reorganize his life in a new context by having his proper place in the country he has migrated to. On the other hand, this project has helped a lot. It allows governments to organize and settle immigrants, prevent economic crises and their employment issues, and make them average citizens according to the law of their country. Cities have dead or unused spaces. Such as the spaces between buildings, the space under bridges, etc., the area of these spaces is generally tiny. Therefore, this plan is intended to be in the form of prefabricated structures in sizes between 5 and 10 square meters, which are mobile. Of course, these structures are such that the ability to supply the space energy they produce. They also have electricity, heating, and cooling). The design of these spaces is such that it requires a minimal amount of land so that it can be implemented on land with an area of 5 square meters. This building can both live and become a shop is active. The inner space and the body, and the outer walls of the space are movable, and it is built in such a way that it can be used for rest at night and during the day with changes in the structure of the space (changing the outer walls, floor, etc.) it can be turned into a store. To be What uses can the store have? Because most of the immigrants come from countries that have native and local arts and crafts (such as African countries, the Middle East, etc.), therefore, handicrafts can be found in these stores. And produce and sell their native art here. On the other hand, governments can finally train these people according to their local and even national needs through non-governmental and private organizations such as NGOs and technical and vocational schools. Finally, after acquiring the skills necessary to provide these spaces for living and working. In this way, these people will have both human character and citizenship, and they will not be a burden on the country they immigrated to in terms of income.
